A rebellion
in Kent.

Thys yeare, the .xxv. day of Ianuary, one Thomas Wyat, George harper, Henry Isley, & Leonard dygges with other, began a rebellion at Maydstone in Kent, & made a Proclamacion, pretending to defende the realme from Spaniards and other straungers. Intending to mayntayne theyr heresy, & too destroy our most gracious & catholyke quene Mary. And after came to Rochester, where came too them dyuers, aswel borne out of Kent as in Kent, as Robert Rudstone, Cutbert Vaughan, Water & Water mantels, Kneuet, Godfrey with diuers other. At which commocion & sturre, although there came to them dyuers out of diuers places of Kente, Yet Cantorbury contynued true and faythfull, in so much as through the goodnes of God, and the circumspect prouision, & diligent attendaunce of Ihon Twyne mayre, and hys brethren thaldermen, with the faithful assistaunce of other, the cytye was defended from foren rebelles, & not so much as one knowen of the said cytye, to haue fled to Wyat or too any of hys adherentes.

The .xxx. daye of the same month, the duke of Norfolke came to Stroude, and bent his artillery against Wyat in Rochester, but the Londoners with theyr capitaines, Bryan Fytzwillyams & Bret, who came with the duke against Wyat made a shoute and fled from the du= ke to Wyat, and the duke hardely scaped.

The next daye, Wyat wente to Cooling, & toke the lord Cobham.

On Candelmas euen, he came to Southwarke, thinkyng to be re ceyued of the Londoners, but the gaynst hym. And lorde Wyllyam Houward, ioined in commission with the mayre, for the surer defence of London, because of the Londoners vntrustines.

The .vi. day February, Wyat went to Kyngston on Tames, and passed ouer the water, wher diuers fled from hym, as the nyght before when he went out of Southwarke.

On Aswednesday the .vii. of Fe bruarye, he and hys complices were ouerronne and taken about charing Crosse & Fletestrete, but Wyat with certayn with hym, had before knoc ked at Ludgate, sayinge: he hadde kept promyse.

And Kneuet with other, hadde most traytorously shot at the Court gate.

shyre, by Gawen and Peter Carow, Gybbes champernham and other, which Peter fled into Fraunce, the cause why wil shortly appeare, but Gawen & Gybbes with other were there taken. And was also confede red with Henry Gray duke of Suf folke, who was apprehended by the worthy Earle of Huntyngham, and was condempned of hygh treason at Westmynster, the .xvii. day of Fe bruarye, & suffred paynes of death for the same at Towre hyl, the .xxiii day of February.

Henry Isly comming to Wyat was encountered by the lord of Abur ganye, maysters Warham & Wil= lyam sentelegers, with the helpe of mayster Clarke of Wroteham, and there discomfited, fled into Hamshyre where he was taken in thapparell of a maryner, hys face dysfigured with cole and dyrt, and so brought captiue to London.

<John Michell (d. 1556) was a printer who set up shop in Canterbury in the 1530s. (Usually he spelt his name 'Mychell'.) This is his account of Wyatt's rebellion, included in the third edition of his 'Breviat cronicle', the last edition that was printed and published by him. There were several subsequent editions, but they were produced by two London printers, John King and Thomas Marsh, who had presumably bought shares of the the copyright from Michell. With minor changes, this same stretch of text occurs in those editions too. – C.F. December 2011.>
